

ABSTRACT

Embodiments include an on die termination circuit. The on die termination circuit may be programmable. The on die termination circuit may be programmed to compensate for environmental conditions and the physical characteristics of the device. The programmed on die termination circuit allows for faster transfer rates over communication lines by reducing the time needed to recover from signal reflection and similar issues.